"The Three Kingdoms" is one of the four most influential and important novels in Chinese literature. Hundreds of plays, other novels, short-stories, songs, operas etc. have been more or less directly inspired by this episodically written account of one of the most turbulent times of Chinese history. And especially in the last few years films like "Red Cliff" carried the story on.

Another interpretation of the period is that it began with the decline of the Han royal house. According to Mao Zonggang, a commentator on the Romance of the Three Kingdoms, in his commentary on Chapter 120 of the novel: The three kingdoms formed when the Han royal house declined. The Han royal house declined when the eunuchs abused the sovereign and officials subverted the government.

Unless Moss Roberts thought that only those already versed in the historical period of the Three Kingdoms would read this, I cannot fathom why he would deem it appropriate or even necessary to reveal such things to the reader without warning him first. I suppose this was published before the phrase *spoiler alert* was coined.
